THE PRESS.

HENRY REED, Editor. Cincinnati, Thursday, March 3.

CORRESPONDENCE, containing important news, solicited from any quarter of the world.

NO NOTICE taken of anonymous correspondence. We do not return rejected communications.

Freedom of the Press.

"We have been inclined," says the editor of the Logan Gazette, "to the belief, that what is called the freedom of the press,' in this country, is an arrant humbug. In no portion of the world where the press is tolerated at all, does it enjoy practically, less liberty than here. Pains penalties and forfeitures are not quite so rigorous, perhaps, as elsewhere, but they are quite as effective; because, if less severe, they are all the more certain of infliction

This picture of the conditions to which the public press of the United States is subject, is, if true, exceedingly sorrowful; and that there are many things to give it the appearance of truth, can not be denied. Still we must cling to the opinion that freedom of the press-absolute independence in journalism-is possible; and thatit is, therefore, a thing which it is desirable to attain. Indeed, if there were not a possible independence, journalism would not only cease to be one of the liberal arts, but one of the respectable avocations. It is the idea of freedom, as connected with his employment, which distinguishes the voluntary labors of the master from the drudgery imposed upon the slave.

That the professions of freedom made by journalists, in most cases, are in some sense deserving the name of humbugs, may be true. There is, in reality, very little independence in the world, here or elsewhere; and yet there are, doubtless, many who, if they knew how, would be independent, and are so, in reality, to the extent of their power. But man is born into a system of conventionalities, the greater part of which are time-honored fallacies. His mind is in chains from its birth, and at every advance he makes, or change that takes place in his condition, there are new bonds in readiness, adapted to his altered circumstances. His education is a process by which he is made to receive, without question, the conclusions to which others have arrived. He becomes at the same time a citizen and a partisan, a Christian and a sectarian, and, in his ignorance and inexperience, is forced to receive his first lessons in religion and politics in that which is made up of the smallest amount of truth, mixed up with the largest proportion of error and prejudice. Perhaps the man perfectly free from these trammels, who succeeded in throwing off every vestige of the chains of conventionalism, and bringing his unfettered reason to bear upon every subject of human concern, never existed. Perhaps, if found, he would not be permitted to live. Socrates and Jesus-personages addicted to the offense of paying too little respect to current prejudices-were accounted seditious, and done to death for the good of society, by their more conservative fellow citizens. The great majority of mankind receive that which they are taught for truth: they therefore not only do not break the chains which they inherit, but fail to discover them. Such people live all their lives in a state of content with themselves of the city. and their opinions-attaching a sort of sanctity to the latter, from the fact that their belief is a matter of faith, and therefore not subject to examination by the intellect. To expose their opinions to analysis is a sort of sacrilege, which they love to pay off with persecution. They have, therefore, no conception of a state of intellectual independence; and, as did the Scribes and Pharisees, look upon every man who assumes to think originally, as a fee to the public tranquillity. There are such in the editorial profession-men no more capable to reach that independence of mind which is necessary to a free press, than JONAH would have been to swallow the whale in whose in-mentable. Men, from motives of interest, voluntarily sell themselves to party, and, with their eyes open, become the propagandists of error and untruth. But even this is not the worst form of newspaper prostitution. In all well-established concerns there is apt to be a conservatism of the treasury, which is more slavish and less respectable than any other form of moral meanness connected with the trade. There is, peradventure, a job office, whose interest is to be promoted and whose business extended by a judicious use of puffery and cajolery of men and things in the editorial columns. There are classes which, for the profits accruing in various ways from their friendship, require to be flattered, and which soon find how easy it is to control the sentiment of the journal that is fishing for their support-to suppress truth and circulate falsehood. The disease, once admitted, grows wider and wider, taking in a still enlarging field, until the whole thing, in all its departments, changed from its true employment and become the mere instrument of the avarice of its proprietors, stands a perpetually offensive example of untruth, timidity and insincerity.

terior he was entertained. There are cases of willingly-resigned

IT is not probable that the attempt to impeach the President of the United States, however suspicious, in respect to honesty, the transactions with which he stands implicated, will redound much to the credit of those who make it, or to the advantage of the party to which they belong. Impeachments of high official personages are always of doubtful expediency; and the success of those that have been undertaken in the United States, has not been such as greatly to encourage a repetition of the process. They have ever been occasions of high party excitement. in consequence of the fact that ulterior considerations will enter in and give character to the prosecution and defensethe party in the affirmative hoping not merely to convict the impeached, but to overthrow the political organization to which he belongs; and the party in the negative, in order to avoid such a result, laboring to screen the defendant, and give to the proceeding the character of a persecution. Indeed, impeachment, under any circumstances, is a remedy of very questionable value; and under our form of polity, desirable only in the extremest cases. Our elections recur often, and an officer flagrantly corrupt will not, in general, fail of the treatment which he deserves, when he falls into the hands of the people. It is impossible to divest the impeachment of its party aspect; consequently it carries with it, in the eyes of the people, but little moral force, and its results are looked upon rather as party products than as judicial conclusions. Entered into as a means for the creation of political capital, it should, and probably will, end in damaging its originators.

A BILL has been introduced into the House of Representatives of Ohio, to create a Board of Police Commissioners in Cincinnati. Notes of preparation for this measure have been, from time to time, sounded here, by the "Enquirer." The Hamilton County Delegation at Columbus has been canvassed and caucused, and it is said that they will be unanimous in its favor. It is strictly a party measure, concocted by politicians of the Democratic connection in this city, having for its object to remove the appointment of the police from the Mayor, and-whatever may be the result of the coming election-keep in Democratic hands this important power. The plan is as indefensible upon the score of principle as it is suspicious in respect to its authors; and taken all in all, is perhaps the most mischievous and disreputable device of

THE people of Utah seem to be in a fair way to realize a handsome profit on the slander of jobbers and the mal-administration of Government officials, to which they have been subjected. The army at Camp Floyd furnishes an excellent market for the surplus products of the inheritance of the Saints, putting United States gold into the pockets of the elect at the rate of about $3,000,000 per annum, and transforming them, without doubt, into thrifty and exemplary citizens of this glorious Republic. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good.

THE history of the debt of New Orleans is identical with that of similar ob ligations in Cincinnati and elsewhere. The total debt of that city is $7,988,135the great mass of which, says the "Delta," has been incurred to pay a swarm of office-holders, to enrich contractors, and to meet enormous shaves on the obligations

THE politicians of Indiana are agitating a scheme for a Constitutional Convention. Howoften does a State, in these fast times, require to have its constitution rejuvenated? The idea of permanency, as connected with organic law, in view of present practice, is somewhat old-fashioned.

INCREASED POSTAGE .- The bill which has recently passed the Senate, raises—Ist. The postage of single letters from three to five cents postage of single letters from three to five cents each; double, treble, &c., letters in proportion. 2d. The postage of newspapers carried out of the county in which they are respectively published to one cent per copy. In other words, doubles and quadraples the present postage on newspapers of general circulation. And yet, in the third place, it refuses to abolish the franking privilege. In other words, remarks the New York "Tribune," the Senate refuses to make all who use the mails pay for such use, and insists that those who now pay shall pay nearly double, in order to cover the cost of carrying other people's missives for nothing. freedom of the press that are really la- rying other people's missives for nothing.

PRO BONO PUBLICO

We invite attention to the fact that, having greatly increased our facilities by enlarging our store to more than twice its former size, we are prepared to supply all orders for the very best of goods in our line, and at a small advance. Our long experience in public life, making extensive acquaintances, eminently fits us for caterers to the public taste, and we have no hesitation in saying-from the approval we have already received-that our selections are suited to the demands of the consumer.

BRANDIES.

We have some very old Brandy, which has been pronounced by competent judges the best in the city by the bottle, case, or 's-casks.

Bourbon Whisky.

We have a large stock of Howard's and Harp's Old Bourbon-some of it over six years of age-which is unsurpassed for smoothness and richness of flavor, and which we warrant perfectly pure; by the bottle case, or on draft.

WINES.

Our stock of Wines is large and well-selected-both Madeira and Sherry.

FIRST. It is single and double-thread combined; and, as nany kinds of work require only a single thread, there will be a corresponding saving of cotton.

It makes a firm, clastic stitch, which will not ravel, though every third stitch is cut. THIRD. The feed, (which is a very important matter in a sewing machine,) is adjustible, and can be so arranged as to sew on the finest fabric, and then run up to any required thickness, with but slight alteration of the tension of the thread,

FOURTH. The intermediate pressure placed in front of the food, to hold the cloth while the former goes back, is a happy discovery, entirely NEW, and insures a positive stitch; at the same time, it supports and consequently prevents the breaking of needles, which is a great point gained, as most other machines are ren-dered very expensive by the frequent breaking of them, so much so, that their economy has been ques-tloned.

This machines makes a more beautiful stitch and approximates nearer to a shuttle-stitch than any other now made, and on cloth can scarcely be distinguished from it. This machine is operated by a belt, and can be raised up to adjust the under spool and looper with-out removing the belt, and sows with the machine thus raised the same as when in its proper place, which is a great convenience in threading and spooling the under looper. SEVENTH: The thread-tightener on this machine is so arranged that the speel is placed on a triangular spindie securely, the spindle turning on centers with the spool; and after you have the proper tension it does not require to be changed until the thread is entirely run off the spool. It sews from two ordinary spools, thus avoiding the trouble of winding. It runs silk, linen threads and common speed cotton with equal facility, and is so simple in its construction and so arranged that a young girl of ten years could operate it.

The Sales-rooms are No. 7, under the Burnet House on THIRD STREET, where the Machines will be exhibited with pleasure to any one who may call.
